

Black and White Photography - Reflections

Have a look at the following photographs and all on the theme of reflections.

Take a set (5-10) of your own on this theme. With photography it is important to develop your idea and sometimes work out how you may achieve a particular effect. This might be simply working out the best time of day to take a photograph, or taking it several times in different conditions. There is more to it than just popping outside to press the button five times.

These examples hopefully will give you some ideas of the possibilities, but primarily it is about you looking closely at the world around you. Reflections can mean more than just an image in a reflective surface....
